

Learning & Teaching Repository Newsletter

December 2020

The Universities Australia Learning and Teaching Repository is a collection of higher education learning and teaching research valuable to any university academic.

At the end of a most difficult year, it is a pleasure to celebrate the work of researchers in the scholarship of learning and teaching whose work has been added to the Universities Australia Learning and Teaching Repository, at <https://ltr.edu.au>.

Research published on the Learning and Teaching Repository this year examines several key themes that are highly relevant to 2020.

- Embedding employability thinking across the sector, and Practice-based student learning
- Building resilience
- Indigenous knowledge, and Culturally safe pedagogies
- Digital literacy, Accessibility and the use of graphics
- Students' assessment feedback preferences; and Learning analytics beyond the LMS
- Personalised learning support in large student cohorts

Share your practice

The Learning and Teaching Repository welcomes new contributions related to learning and teaching in Australian higher education. The key audience is learning and teaching researchers and practitioners, including early career academics. Both interdisciplinary and discipline-specific material related to learning and teaching is in scope.

All materials included in the Repository are made available under the Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike Licence, to provide flexibility to re-use and adapt resources across the sector.
